“From Research to Practice: Across Nursing, Midwifery and Health Sciences”

20th and 21st September 2018
Hochschule für Gesundheit, Bochum (Germany)

hsg/Wiciok

University of Central Lancashire

■ What is planned?

This conference will demonstrate examples of practice-based applied clinical research; highlighting effective partnership between clinical practitioners and experienced researchers. We will describe how this approach can have an impact on clinical excellence and practice development.

■ What is this conference about?

Day One – Thursday 20th September 2018 9am–5.30pm

Our exciting program includes keynote talks from world-leading researchers from across nursing, midwifery and health sciences. There will also be a wide range of invited papers to present collaborative clinical research between academics and practitioners as well as poster presentations in various healthcare disciplines to demonstrate the connection of strong clinical research and patient care.

Day Two – Friday 21st September 2018 9am–4pm

In response to popular demand, there will be a limited number of seats for half-day workshops, open exclusively for attendees who have fulfilled Day One. There will be a selection of 5 parallel interactive workshops to provide the opportunity to share experiences and learning with international colleagues.

There will be further invited paper presentations across nursing, midwifery and allied sciences, with a powerful closing session to focus on the future key contribution of clinical research for patients and health service delivery.
